An Appreciation

The Lovable Meddler

"Just now, when there is so much fiction that is, if not downright objectionable, at least doubtful; when every conceivable problem is discussed in loose and unprofitable argument, it is a real joy to pick up so wholesome and pleasant a tale as 'The Lovable Meddler.'

"Anyone who has been so fortunate as to know a real Scotch family physician of the old school will agree that the dear old 'Meddler' himself is most admirably done and is exceptionally true to life. The 'lads and lasses' are all equally lovable and are of such varied types that there is not a dull page or prosy situation.

"It is a long time since I have enjoyed a book more, or read one which I can more honestly recommend with the sure conviction that it will give real pleasure. I predict for 'The Lovable Meddler' a sure, wide-spread and lasting popularity and shall take great pleasure in doing all I can to help bring this to pass."

The foregoing from one of our customers reflects the general opinion of those who have read the book.

The Lovable Meddler will undoubtedly be one of the best sellers of the Fall. Be prepared to get your share of the business the real merit of the novel and our big publicity campaign is sure to create.

A GREAT NEW DORAN NOVEL

Published August 12th

You know how many Doran novels have a big and genuine distinction—novels by Arnold Bennett, Hugh Walpole, Patrick MacGill, Beresford, Onions, Comfort, among the realists; or by Conan Doyle, Ralph Connor, and the other famous tellers of romance.

A new novel of ducal rank in this array is announced:

OF HUMAN BONDAGE

By W. Somerset Maugham

A novel that tells as clearly, as compellingly as a photograph tells the news, what twenty-one years—year by steady year—really mean in the life of a man.

A novel by the brilliant dramatist who has in a few years stepped into the class with Shaw, Pinero, Jones.

A story that is so big that not to know about it is to argue oneself as ignorant of contemporary fiction as though one had never heard of Wells or Bennett. 12 Mo. Net $1.50

THE MAXIMUM BOOK MARKET—AN ATTEMPT AT AN ESTIMATE.

WHAT may be the maximum possible market for the sale of books in these United States with their 100,000,000 inhabitants?—meaning in this case books of the grade and class ordinarily sold in retail bookstores and excluding on the one hand sales of rare books, for which the market is à priori limited, and on the other hand Bibles, for example, for which the sale is, theoretically at least, practically universal.

The question is not without its practical bearings, not so much for any value its answer may have in gauging the sale of any individual book as in enabling both publisher and bookseller to survey in a broader sense the book market of the country, to estimate the absorptive power of the United States for a book output.

Obviously, that 100,000,000 inhabitants, which the census statisticians tell us the country possessed some time last April, is a most deceptive answer. There are numerous broad eliminations to be made. Undoubtedly, at best, possible—not present, mind you, but possible—bookbuyers form but a minority of that 100,000,000. The publisher's job is to find out what this minority is and how it may be reached without wasting energy on the unfruitful majority.

"The tests to be applied in planning the sale of any product," said an article in Obiter Dicta last December, are: "(1) How many people can use the product. (2) How many of these can afford it. (3) How many of these can profitably be reached by both the news and the product. This is far different from the guesswork method employed by many. And when these tests are applied it is amazing to see how the field narrows. It is also gratifying to find that the problem of salesmanship is vastly simplified.

"No product can support intensive selling effort in every nook and cranny of the nation. The expense would be prohibitive. The problem is to determine what to reject—what classes of the population, what geographical sections, what avenues of trade—then to concentrate selling effort on the rest. This demands, above all, careful study of the population figures."

The entire population of the country may be roughly divided along three general lines: 1, race and literacy; 2, distribution and environment; and, 3, wealth and social condition.

First, however, we must remember that, of our 100,000,000 population, 40 per cent. are children. Most children are not, individually, bookbuyers, certainly not in the sense that we have used the term. This reduces our 100,000,000 to, let us say, 65,000,000.

But of our population, 10,000,000 are negroes and 13,000,000 foreign born. In both classes, illiteracy is high and purchasing power low. Only 3,000,000 of the 13,000,000 foreign born are naturalized and less than 40 per cent have been in this country 15 years. With every possible allowance, it is improbable that as much as 5 per cent of our negro adult population are even prospective bookbuyers, and despite the fact that many foreign-born citizens are thoroughly Americanized and well-to-do, probably not over 25 per cent of this class may be considered possible bookbuyers. With proper allowances for adults, this reduces our 65,000,000 to 54,000,000

Among even the native white population, the percentage of illiteracy (and inability to read is certainly a fairly effective bar to bookbuying) is high in some parts of the country, particularly in the South. Study of the regional statistics on this point, and the further elimination of the proper percentage for the criminal and insane, warrant us in reducing the 54,000,000 to 42,000,000.

But not all who may wish to buy books can afford to do so. The income tax statistics, the only even tolerably accurate statistical data we have, inform us that there are something over 300,000 people in the United States who have an annual income of $3000 or more. But while it is probably true that eighty or ninety per cent of our present bookbuying comes from this 300,000, it is by no means limited to them, and there is no doubt that a very large class of possible bookbuyers are below the $3000 line.

Professor F. H. Streightoff, of Columbia University, says, in his study of the average earnings of the American family:

A consideration of the evidence found in all the available reports leads to the conclusion that in 1904, and probably at the present time, at least half of the males aged sixteen or more, engaged in gainful occupations, were earning less than $625 a year. This statement cannot be considered a description of the distribution of incomes, for there is sometimes a wide difference between the earnings of the head of a household and its actual receipts. [The average number of persons gainfully employed per family is 1.82.] It neither refutes nor confirms the belief of Dr. Spahr, that in 1892, 11,000,000, or seven-eighths of the American families, had incomes under $1200, but it is interesting to note that of nineteen and a half million men tabulated hardly one-twelfth were annually earning more than $1000 (or $1043). This estimate of at least one-half the adult males earning less than $626 per annum is in perfect harmony with the results of Professor Nearing, provided his rather questionable deduction for unemployment be ignored.

The rough deduction from these figures is that less than one-third of our gross adult population, and perhaps less than one-half of the net population reached above, can afford ever to be buyers of books. This reduces, in other words, 42,000,000 to 21,000,000.

In actual practice, however, if we are viewing the problem from the trade point of view, we must make a further deduction. By the United States census, all persons living in towns of less than 2500 are classed as rural residents. Although certain allowance must be made for such "rural" localities as are really suburbs of large cities and for such other rural inhabitants as are in close touch with or have been directly under urban influences, it is nevertheless true that probably twenty-five per cent of the net population above reached must be deemed so strictly rural in their environment and outlook as to be out of the bookbuying class. Until the rural free delivery and parcel post, good roads and the automobile, the Chautauqua and the country Y. M. C. A., the agricultural college, the traveling library and the improved country school have been long enough at work to complete the practical revolution now under way in the way of living and modes of thought of the more isolated farmer, we must admit that he is only too often neither a possible bookbuyer nor a possible book reader. That the retail bookstore does not at present reach the average farmer, even by mail, is not an absolute criterion, however. He is being reached sometimes—with books. The question is whether he might be reached by the bookseller.

After all, however, as is evident, 16,000,000 (potential or actual bookbuyers) is not exactly a disappointingly small field to work upon. Few retailers of goods other than "the necessities" face a larger one. The PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY is strongly inclined to doubt whether there are to-day, in the entire country, even 500,000 people who, by any stretch of the term, can be called "regular" bookbuyers. And it seriously questions whether there are 5,000,000 people in the country who ever bought a book (that is, outside of devotional books and school books) of a retail bookstore!

The feeling that the possible book market has been only scratched, and that, after all, is about the size of it, ought to be an inspiriting one. To the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY it seems amazingly inspiring. Theoretical in its details the above analysis may be; but the basic fact remains, admitted and evident, that booksellers have not yet begun to work the bookselling mine. We may not know exactly how many possible bookbuyers we have never yet reached; it is sufficient to know that the untouched field is many, many times larger than the one now being exploited.

THE PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY has already had occasion to note the disastrous effect of the war on the book trade of France. In Germany, while the superb organization of the book trade has mitigated to some extent the effect of the war, yet both in the number of titles published and books sold the German trade shows a marked decrease. A fresh indication of the situation in England is furnished by the announcement that The Bookseller, of recent years published as a weekly, is resuming temporarily its former monthly issue, and that The Book Monthly will appear as a quarterly until the end of the war. "Now that hostilities have already lasted close on twelve months, and there is at present little hope of an early termination," says The Bookseller, in announcing its change, "it is clear we were all too sanguine and optimistic. It is therefore necessary to take stock of the changed position. Business activity in the book and publishing trades is materially modified." As to the extent of this modification, we have it on the authority of The New Statesman that, except for war books, publishing in England is almost at a standstill. Looking ahead, the warning of Premier Asquith, the warn' – heard now on every hand, that England ·— · economize still further if she is to meet her war debts, bodes ill for the coming months. J. A. Hobson, writing in a recent issue of The New Republic, points out that the solution of England's financial problem involves the disappearance of all extravagance and "the most rigorous economy in clothing, literature, holiday and all other modes of unnecessary spending." With this prospect ahead, the English trade probably derives but little comfort from even the glowing predictions of the renascence of letters which will follow the war.

ADVERTISING AND MERCHANDISING BOOKS.

(By Carl G. Percy, Advertising Manager Eaton, Crane & Pike Co., before Book Publishers' Conference, Associated Advertising Clubs of the World, Chicago, June 20-24.)

At the present time, books are advertised in a desultory sort of way, and the merchandising of them in a retail store is well done only by a few merchants in the retail business. It would appear upon the surface that there is an excellent opportunity in such an important field as book publishing for the most modern publicity and merchandising campaigns. Therefore, I should like to have you consider with me a few of the surface facts apparent to the lay observer.

The book is a commodity with a possible market to all literary people of twelve years and over. The only limits to the possible consumption of books are those of time and purchasing power. In this sense the word "consumption" is used as analogous to reading. A certain actual need for a limited number of books exists for which there always is and always will be a certain demand that needs no exploitation. Thus we find that the book as a commodity knows practically no market limitations and is not confined in its sale by any question of sex or age.

The book is entirely different from any manufactured article that I can think of in the sense that it is neither of the sea nor of the land; it is a product of the human brain, and it deals with all the varying interests of humanity. Thus, it has what we advertising men term a human-interest appeal, which, in this case, seems an unlimited appeal.

The novel supplies a more popular demand than does non-fiction by furnishing a convenient form of entertainment. But placidly willing to forego the possibilities of wide distribution and the powerful element of human interest in the novel, the publishers only shake their heads with a longitudinal, can't-be-done motion when asked to advertise. It is only fair to the publishers at this point to admit that they have difficult problems to overcome. Take the publishers of the novel, for example. His product depends upon the most unreliable of all elements, the human mind, and in the case of the author, unusually unreliable because of the element of temperament that has often, unfortunately, been found to be in existence. No publisher can be sure that the public will like this or that author's new book, nor can they be sure of a second volume from any particular writer's pen. On the surface it would seem that it is hardly fair to criticise the publisher for being unable to see the wisdom of spending a big advertising appropriation in securing a large following of readers for an author who might "up and die" without the least consideration for the advertising appropriation.

First novels are always a gamble, and again it is only fair to say that an author is not a good advertising proposition until he has published several fairly successful books, and here we find a peculiar condition. In such a case advertising is not justified until a success has been made without advertising. When I use the term "advertising" I mean advertising in a national sense. We all know that publishers grind out a certain amount of so-called literature which they term advertising, but I wish to draw the clearer distinction and say, emphatically, that in speaking of advertising for novels, I mean real, national advertising. Personally I cannot believe that there is not a way out of this problem via the advertising route.

In searching the field of national advertising successes for some basis of comparison, my attention has been drawn to the similarity of conditions existing between the publishing business and the food products business.

There is Beech Nut, for instance. When I first came to know the products of this concern, I was familiar first with its peanut butter, and next with its bacon. Now, and without the aid of any national advertising, I have become familiar through the association of names, with their mints and chewing gum. This is distinctly a case of "a family of products" and here the parallel presents itself. Why should not the publishers develop this "family" idea? Suppose a prominent publisher were to take a well known author and exploit his works on a big, national scale. I have one in mind who has written four or five novels that have been extremely popular, and the sales must now total well over the million mark. By exploiting this writer's works in such a way as successfully to tie up the name of the publisher, as Beech Nut ties up the name of Beech Nut with their various commodities, I cannot see, personally, why it would not be possible for this concern to exploit a new book by a new author in connection with the house name and derive great value from the popularity of the author's works. Granted that this policy could be continued without the serious mistake of attempting to market a book which was not meritorious—distribution possibilities and merchandising possibilities considered—I fail to see why there is not the basis here for a tremendous advertising success.

Continuing this thought farther and remembering that we are discussing novels, it would seem to me indeed possible for a publisher to say to himself: "Now, I will publish books of a certain class, and I will make my name known to the public as the foremost publisher of books of the character that I intend to produce, and then by national advertising I will first attempt to get all the business which actually exists for this type of publication. Having secured this by educational advertising, I will attempt to increase the demand for this type of publication. When these two things have been accomplished and my name has become thoroughly associated in the public mind with the type of books that I am publishing, and I see no further possibilities of adding to my "family" of products, as it were, I could then consider the possibility of adding books of another class to my publishing lists.

This would probably cost me more in selling expenses, nevertheless, I would be able to have my men concentrate their energies on the sale of an idea, rather than a miscellaneous library, and my men would have more time to do missionary work with the clerks, a thing which is impossible on the part of a man who is selling a hundred and one miscellaneous books dealing with as many subjects.

To summarize this idea briefly, the publisher adopting this plan would have an idea and a firm name to advertise and would not be in the same category with the present type of publisher who, virtually, has to make an individual business out of each title.

I understand that the sale of 3,500 copies of a novel will pay all expenses and allow the author enough profit for a box of cigars, or a box of candy, and pay for the overhead charges for pen, paper, and ink, while a publisher can make enough out of this number of books to buy the author a lunch, and spend a dollar green fees for a game of golf. If this is the case there surely ought to be enough money for a substantial advertising appropriation in the production of an edition of from one to two hundred thousand novels.

I have a certain author in mind who is reasonably sure of selling 100,000 copies of his novel in advance of publication. Grant, for the sake of arbitrary figures, that there is a 20 per cent profit in the sale of each book for the author, and an equal profit for the publisher. On the basis of an edition of 100,000 there would be a gross profit of $40,000. Grant also that the author and publisher agree to forego 75 per cent of their profits and put $30,000 into an advertising campaign which would be wound up within three months. There would be left a profit of $5000 each for the publisher and author.

Now, it is hard for you as advertising men to imagine that the expenditure of $30,000 in a live campaign in the national magazines would not more than double the sale of 100,000. If it exactly doubled the sale, the profit would be $80,000, which, after deducting the $30,000 spent for advertising, would leave a net of $50,000 or an extra profit of $10,000 due to the publicity.

If this campaign properly tied up the name of the publisher in connection with the title, it is probable that at least 5 per cent of this money could be considered as an investment on his next advertising campaign of a different author.

There is still another consideration which is of vital importance in the publishing field. After a period of two or three years, these novels are sold to the reprint houses, who take the old plates and produce a book which retails at 50 cents. A tremendously big sale in the original edition at $1.35 means a much greater sale in the re-print edition at 50 cents, and a more advantageous contract for the author and the original publisher, advantageous of course from the standpoint of royalty.

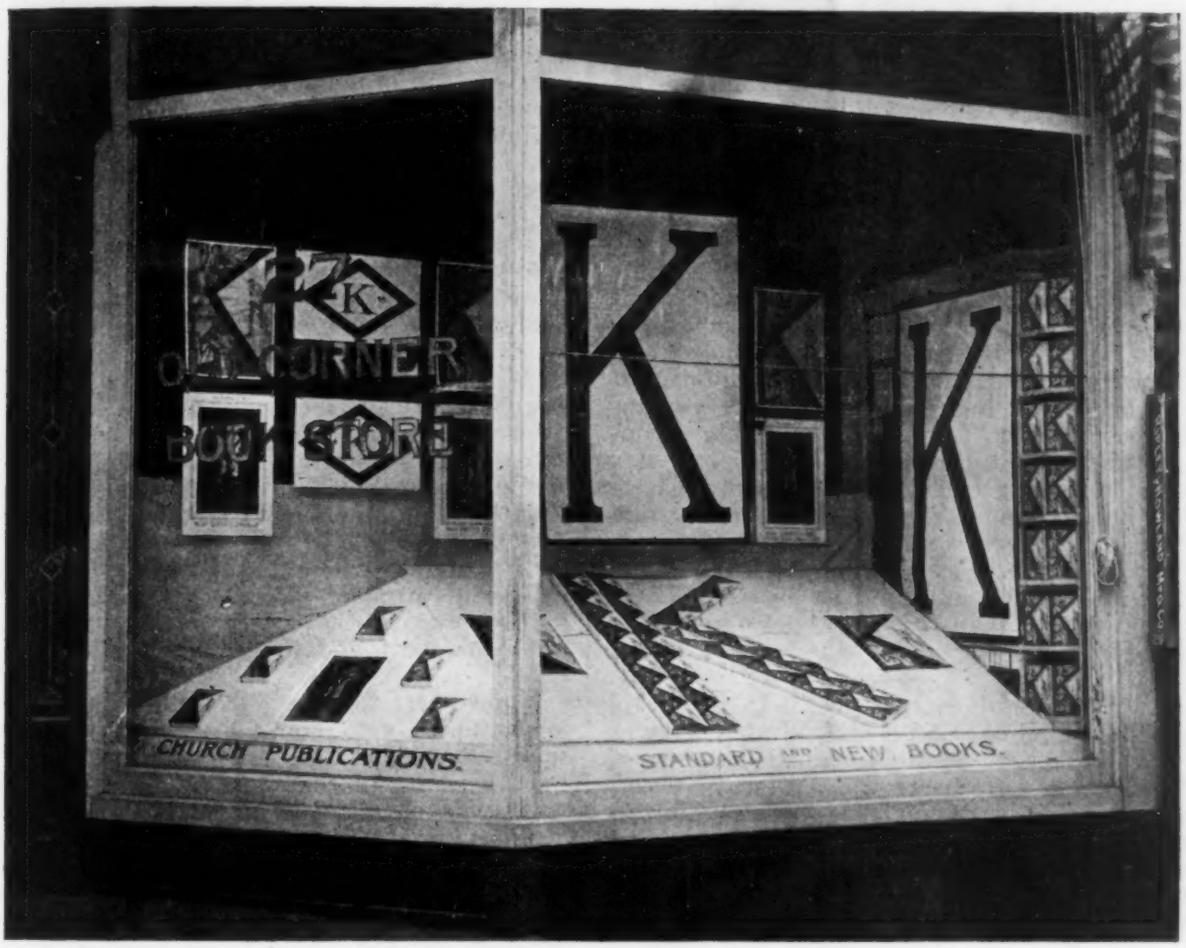
You may grant that this is all very well for novels, but how about the books that have no such wide-spread appeal, real literature for instance? The publishers of books of this type have a certain protection in that most magazines and newspapers, having more of an appreciation of the public's interest in books than the publishers themselves have, run book reviews that would be considered charitable institutions in fields of general advertising. When the publisher produces a new book, he sends the review copy to the magazines and newspapers that maintain book review departments, and these papers give gratuitous write-ups. These book review departments have been of use to publishers in providing advertising material. You will find that many advertisements of books are simply a dilation upon the charitable things said about them by the various newspapers. Book reviewers in many cases do this work to get the books for nothing. Thus, the publishers get in some cases flattering reviews of worthless books from the pens of individuals not capable to judge the merit of a work.

With these opinions circulated in the publisher's advertising there is certain to be some sale as the result, and a still further result in mis-trust of publishers' advertising by those who accept these reviews at their face value, purchase the books and later experience bitter disappointment.

Perhaps I am uncharitable and wield the emblem of Thor too severely in these statements. At least I can justify my remarks by saying that this practice of using book reviews has been often ridiculed, and I find that ridicule usually finds its source in something more substantial than the desire of some malicious person to tear down that which someone else has built up.

On the class of books not enjoying a wide sale, the retail booksellers must do much of the publicity work and personally recommend this class of books by title and by character to those to whom the bookseller has definite knowledge that this or that type of book appeals.

To surmount the difficulty of getting people interested in the idea of books generally, and to accomplish the purpose of getting booksellers to popularize reading, the Publishers' Co-operative Bureau was formed and a competent man put in charge to secure the publicity for the publishers identified with the Bureau. Broadly speaking, it was the purpose of this Bureau to act as a representative of the leading publishers of the country. In this connection, I want to ask how many pages you have seen in the Saturday Evening Post regarding this commendable work? I want to ask you how many of you have noticed campaigns in book stores promoting the idea for which this bureau stands? I can only sur-



A WINDOW WITH A PUNCH.

Through the courtesy of the Old Corner Book Store, of Boston, this window display of "K" was made in advance of publication for Houghton Mifflin Co. The window is noteworthy for its simplicity; comparatively few copies of the book were required. Effective use is made of the posters issued by the publisher.

mise the reason for the lack of a world-wide interest in this Bureau. It is certainly not an enterprise that would gain widespread publicity through the news columns and, to my intimate knowledge, all the other columns in the publications are bought with cash, and real substantial sums at that. This knowledge seems to supply my answer, and I am not taking the trouble to investigate further.

If any one concern, or group of concerns, in the publishing business are to be given credit for active and intelligent advertising work, I think I should credit the re-print houses with having done more toward practical book merchandising than any other house in the field.

It so happens that I was at one time identified with one of these firms, but I wish to make it clear that my part of the general work with this concern was so infinitesimal as to be hardly worthy of mention. Before my connection with the business one of these houses in particular had succeeded to some extent in putting across the idea of asking for books by their concern name. Through its house organ, this firm supplied the dealers with suggestions for window displays, ready-made sales talks with the retail book clerks, and suitable electros for local newspaper advertising. In the matter of imprint circulars for the dealers, this concern was very generous and did a great deal to put the public in touch with the good novels that could be purchased at 50 cents. Later on it developed a more complete merchandising service, and now is specializing on definite ideas such as Photo-play Weeks, Juvenile Weeks, and so on, getting the publicity behind the main idea and letting the individual details fall in their right place as a matter of secondary importance.

Thus they have an easier idea to promote and the retail clerk has a more definite, concrete proposition to put before the book reading public.

And yet, notwithstanding this good work on the part of the re-print houses, I am frank to admit feeling that the opportunities are only half developed. Broadly speaking, it is my feeling that the book trade is tradition bound, and serves as the keystone of the "Can't Be Done" Club of the advertising world at large.

If associations can be formed to advertise lumber, gas, and brick, at a profit, why not books? I would be almost willing to supply the answer myself, and say that it can be done if they would do it, and I am almost equally willing to go a step farther and say it won't be done in our time for the very simple reason that some publishers are suspicious of one another and fear the ground upon which they stand. Co-operation cannot exist where lies suspicion, so until this jealous mistrust of one another is eliminated, we may never expect to see the pages of our national magazines devoted to the idea of promoting the sale of books on a broad, co-operative scale.

As I dictate this, I wonder if it bears a message of constructive value or is merely a tirade, thoroughly unjustified and therefore in very bad taste. I do not know, and I won't attempt an answer. I do most certainly know it to be my personal conviction that from an advertising standpoint the publishing business is one of the big industries of the country that is now most wofully weak. I am convinced that if Cyrus Curtis, or any one of a dozen of our great advertising men, were at the head of a book publishing concern, that that one concern would monopolize the trade to such an extent as to bring about the necessity of speaking of the book publishing concern, rather than of the book publishing business.

A SURVEY OF BOOK PUBLISHING IN THE UNITED STATES SINCE 1860.

In the recent Semi-Centennial Number of the Nation, George Haven Putnam presents an admirable survey of book publishing in this country during the last half century. After an opening paragraph setting forth the general prosperity and optimism of the country in 1860, Mr. Putnam says:

The publishing trade, which had suffered severely during the disasters of 1857 and in the years succeeding the panic, had fairly recovered its normal status and its hopefulness for the future.

In 1860, as had been the case for the preceding quarter of a century or more, Boston might fairly be considered as the chief center of literary and of publishing activities, particularly in connection with the production of books by American authors. Philadelphia, while maintaining the traditions dating back to the printing press of Benjamin Franklin, and sending out from year to year an increasing group of books of importance, had lost ground relatively. The productions of its presses represented in the main the work of local writers. Philadelphia was not attracting to itself the literary workers of the other States. New York, already taking assured lead in the general business of the country, was, during the years succeeding 1860, making large strides in the developing of its printing and publishing business. Its presses were not, like those of Philadelphia, in the main dependent upon the productions of writers of the neighborhood. The city was, like a magnet, attracting to itself from all parts of the continent not only the active-minded men who were concerned with trade, with finance, and with commerce, but hundreds of those who had intellectual ambitions and who hoped in coming to the great city on the coast to find or to make opportunity for the expression of their thought and for a literary career.

New England, which loyally accepted Boston as its metropolis, could, however, during this period lay claim to much the larger number of authors whose works possessed a national importance and in not a few cases a transatlantic reputation.

Hawthorne, whose first writings were printed in New York in 1849, had won immediate fame for himself by his romance, "The Scarlet Letter," issued by Ticknor & Fields in Boston in 1850. With the name of Hawthorne, these enterprising publishers were able to associate those of Emerson, Whittier, Lowell, Holmes, Whipple, and many other active-minded New Englanders. Early in the sixties, Ticknor & Fields took over from the firm of John P. Jewett & Co. "Uncle Tom's Cabin," by Mrs. Stowe. This book had not only crystallized anti-slavery sentiment throughout the English-speaking communities of America and of England, but had done much to shape, in regard to the anti-slavery fight in the United States, the opinion of the whole world. Mr. Jewett, who had been fortunate enough to obtain the publication, ought to have been able to make from this book the foundation of a successful business.

In the years following 1860, Mrs. Stowe followed up "Uncle Tom's Cabin" with a long series of volumes accepted as belonging to the best literature of the age. At about the time when Ticknor & Fields were securing the writings of Mrs. Stowe, they took over from the firm of Phillips, Sampson & Co. the recently established Atlantic Monthly. In those years, the Atlantic served chiefly as an expression of the thought of New England. Widening its sources of contributions and extending its influence, it has now won recognition as the leading literary monthly of the United States.

The publications of the firm of Ticknor & Fields were in later years taken over by the firm which is at this time doing business under the name of Houghton Mifflin Co. With the advantage of the foundation of the group of American authors brought together by their predecessors, and with additions to the list of authors, American and English, of the later generation, Houghton Mifflin Co. have retained a position in the very first group of the publishers of America and of the world.

Little, Brown & Co., whose firm dates back to 1837, were in 1860 leaders among the publishers of New England, as they are to-day among the publishers of the country. Their principal interest had been in the production of authoritative law books, but they had in their hands in this period the important historical works of George Bancroft and Francis Parkman. Parkman's first book, like that of Hawthorne, had been published in New York, and he had been so far discouraged with the result that he had doubted whether he would continue work as an author.

The firm of Roberts Bros. began in the later sixties a publishing business which, largely through the efforts of its literary manager, Mr. Niles, won prompt reputation for its recognition and effective management of good literature, English and American. The firm obtained early prestige and business connections through the enormous success of the "Little Women" and later books of Louisa Alcott. Mr. Niles came into personal relations with the English authors and, years in advance of the beginning of the system of international copyright, he arranged to make payments to these authors for the American editions of their books. The death of Mr. Niles, after some twenty-five years of publishing service, brought the activities of the firm to a close, and its business was taken over by Little, Brown & Co. After the annexation of Roberts's list, this firm widened out its undertakings in general literature. It continued for many years, as the representatives of A. & C. Black, of Edinburgh, to publish in imported supplies the successive editions of the Encyclopædia Britannica. The work found an increasing sale, which finally warranted the production in 1889 of an edition printed on this side of the Atlantic, and the control of this American edition came over to the New York house of Charles Scribner's Sons.

One of the reasons, in addition to the increasing demand for the work from American readers, for bringing into print an American edition was to include certain articles by American authors. The English contributions could not, under the copyright conditions prior to 1891, obtain protection in the United States. It was the hope, however, of the Scotch publishers and of their American representatives, that it would be possible to protect, at least in their entirety, volumes which were made up in part of American material. To further such protection, these American articles were, before being issued in the Encyclopedia, brought into print in separate copyrighted volumes. The attempt on the part of the Blacks and their American representatives to protect their great undertaking from appropriation by American reprinters in Philadelphia and in the West brought about a long series of litigation beginning with 1879. The earlier decisions given in the United States Court in Philadelphia were adverse to the claim of the producers of the Encyclopædia for the control in this country of their material as connected with the Encyclopædia title. One of these Philadelphia judges went out of his way to specify this attempt as an impudent interference with "a legitimate American industry" (namely, that of printing unauthorized editions of British books).

In the twenty years succeeding 1879, there came about a steady development of judicial opinion connected with, if not based upon, a like development on the part of the opinion of the whole literary community, in favor of such interpretation of the principles of common law as would enable the producer of a work to maintain the good-will property that had been built up for the title of such work as a result of efforts and investments extending over a series of years. The later editions of the Encyclopædia were able, therefore, to obtain protection not only because the material was in part American in origin, but on the simple ground that a great good-will property had been built up by the producers of the Encyclopædia, and that it was to the interest of the American community that investments in undertakings of this character should be encouraged. The series of decisions which have brought to a close undertakings constituting "unfair competition," and the establishment of protection for "good will" connected with a title, date from the fight to prevent fraudulent issues of the Encyclopædia Britannica from being sold in this country. The management of the American editions of this work has, therefore, been of first importance in connection with the history of international publishing undertakings.

The great educational house of Boston, with a second house in New York and branches all over the country, during the last quarter of a century, is that of Ginn & Co. Ginn's list of textbooks has done much to maintain for Boston a substantial proportion of the book output of the country.

The publication of books for young people constituted the chief interest during this decade of the firm of Lee & Shepard, of Boston, with which in later days was consolidated the house of D. Lothrop & Co., which had also been active in the production of children's books. "Oliver Optic" and Martha Finley, the author of the Elsie books, were writers whose volumes obtained the largest popularity with the children of this generation.

New England had at this time several publishing centers outside of Boston. In Andover, the interests of orthodox theology, under which heading were classed Congregational and Presbyterian writers, were taken care of by W. F. Draper. His business closed only as late as 1910, after the Andover Theological Seminary had been merged into the Theological School of Harvard University.

The publishing house in Springfield, which might be considered also as a publishing house for the country and for the whole English-speaking world, was that of Merriam, which had developed from decade to decade the famous dictionary first compiled by the New Englander, Noah Webster.

Hartford was carrying on a business important in bulk, if not perhaps in literary quality, in the production and sale of subscription books; that is to say, of books that were distributed by canvassers through the country. In later years the publication of subscription books was developed to greater proportions in New York and Philadelphia.

In New York, at this time, the leading publishing houses were the Harpers, the Appletons, Charles Scribner, G. P. Putnam, Sheldon, Hurd & Houghton, Randolph, and Carter.

The Harpers, whose book-publishing business was begun in 1832, were carrying on their two periodicals, Harper's Monthly and Harper's Weekly. They had an important educational list, which years later was transferred to the American Book Company. They were adding from year to year noteworthy books in general literature from American authors; and they had what was probably the most considerable list of that day of American editions of books originating in Great Britain. Some of the British fiction, such as the stories of Thackeray, and later of Thackeray's daughter, Anne, afterwards Lady Ritchie, Miss Mulock, Charles Reade, etc., came into print first in the pages of the magazine. In the absence of international copyright, a firm which, like the Putnams, the Harpers, and others, had direct correspondents in London, while not in a position to obtain exclusive control in the States of the books of English authors, was able to make an early market for such books and frequently to crush out any competing editions. The payments to English authors were not large, but in the greater number of cases at least they were all that the market would afford for books that could not be protected.

Partly with a view of reaching a wide general public, but chiefly, I imagine, for the purpose of making effective the fight against other publishers who were reprinting books asserted by them to be "Harper authors," the Harpers started a little later than the time now in question the publication of the Franklin Square Library of fiction. The numbers in this series of paper-bound quartos sold at 15 cents, and the library came to include the names of many of the most popular of the British fiction writers of the day. The reprinters, who were not prepared, in the absence of any copyright protection, to accept the claim of the Harpers to the control of English authors to whom they had made courtesy payments, were flooding the market with similar cheap paper-bound issues of these authors. But few of these reprinters succeeded in maintaining even for a brief term any remunerative business in the publication of unauthorized reprints. John Munro, a capable Canadian, who had gone early into the reprint business, did, however, make a success with his ventures. Munro and the other printers of such unauthorized issues were naturally the most vigorous opponents of the various attempts to secure international copyright, which finally resulted in the act of 1891.

The house of Appletons, whose business had been organized a little later than that of the Harpers, had an important educational list which was transferred later to the American Book Company. They published successive editions of "Appleton's Encyclopædia," which was the best literary work of reference as yet produced in this country. The scientific lists of the Appletons, selected largely under the counsel of Dr. E. L. Youmans, came to possess distinctive importance. It was Dr. Youmans who brought the house into correspondence with British writers like Spencer, Tyndall, Huxley, Darwin, and others; and it was also through Dr. Youmans that was instituted the International Science series. This series had importance not merely on the ground of the value of the material prepared by writers of authority on the several subjects considered, selected from all parts of the world, and presented at a very moderate price for American readers, but because it helped to constitute an important precedent in international publishing. It was the contention of Dr. Youmans, a contention which had been maintained for years before by George P. Putnam, that publishing undertakings ought not to be limited by political boundaries. Literature and science and art were the property of the whole world. Dr. Youmans took early advantage of the method, the importance of which had also been emphasized by George P. Putnam as far back as 1848, of the lessening of the cost of good books by dividing among a number of markets the amount of the compensation due to the author and of the cost of production of illustrations, maps, etc. Under such a plan, the International Science series, or the later similar Putnam international series, the "Story of the Nations" and the "Heroes of the Nations," could be produced in several national editions, from which the author obtained full compensation based upon the widest distribution; while it was possible to give to the final consumer, the reader or student, a large amount of authoritative material suitably printed, at a very much more moderate cost than would ever have been possible in the case of the same work produced for one market only.

The practice that was maintained by such houses as the Appletons, Scribners, Roberts, Putnams, Holt, and others, in advance of an international copyright law, of making payments to transatlantic authors, helped to develop on both sides of the Atlantic public opinion in behalf of an international copyright system. It became possible to refer to these international series as examples of books which, while making due recognition of the rights of the author, gave inexpensive material for the needs of the American public.

The house of Scribner had been founded by Charles Scribner in the early fifties. The firm took from the beginning of its operations an important part in international relations. In these earlier years, as in later times, its group of theological publications, comprising works from both sides of the Atlantic, had been of distinctive importance; but its managers had also been interested in coming into early relations with English writers. In co-operation with English houses, they brought out the American editions of many important series, such as the works of Froude, the "Epochs of History," the Hibbert Lectures, and the writings of Stevenson. Their list of American authors included some of the most popular writers of the half-century from Marion Harland and Frank Stockton to Thomas Nelson Page. The connection of the firm with the ninth edition of the Encyclopædia Britannica has already been referred to. Among the popular Scribner authors of this earlier period may be mentioned Dr. John G. Holland, who interested himself later in bringing into existence the earlier Scribner's Monthly. The heads of the house of Scribner had from an early date been active with the Appletons and with the Putnams in the work for international copyright.

The list of George P. Putnam included during these years the works of Washington Irving, Bayard Taylor, Susan Warner, and a number of other American authors It included also an increasing list of the authorized American editions of English books. Mr. Putnam originated and carried on during the years of the Civil War the "Rebellion Record," which has since proved an indispensable quarry for the work of historians of the war. Mr. Putnam was the first American publisher to invade England, and he carried on publishing business in London from 1841 to 1848. Since 1848, the Putnams have maintained close publishing relations with Great Britain, and their books bear the imprint of New York and London. Up to the time of his death, in 1872, George P. Putnam gave unremitting effort to the work of obtaining international copyright. It was his belief that an international copyright relation was not only essential for the good repute and ethical standards of the book-reading communities of the United States, but that it would prove of essential service for the interests of publishers, of authors, and of readers on both sides of the Atlantic. During the last quarter of the century, the Putnams brought into print authoritative editions of the series of the Writings of the Fathers of the Country from Washington to Lincoln.

Anson D. F. Randolph, who was also interested from an early date in the international copyright undertaking, had given his energies chiefly to the development of a retail business. He had brought together upon his list a number of religious authors, most of whom were his personal friends, and he also had some books of a popular character, such as the "Stepping Heavenward" of Mrs. Prentice.

M. W. Dodd, the founder of the firm later known as Dodd, Mead & Co., had given his attention largely to books of a religious character. Even such fiction as the Schönberg-Cotta books was largely of this nature. Under the management of Mr. Dodd's son and successor, Mr. F. H. Dodd, the business of the first was widened out with undertakings of large importance. The most noteworthy of these was the International Encyclopædia. After some twenty-five years of development, a reshaped, one may perhaps not venture to say a final, edition is now in the press. Dodd's literary monthly, The Bookman, is rendering excellent service to the interests of authors, publishers, and readers.

The house of Sheldon concerned itself partly with educational books, and largely with popular religious literature. The Sheldons made a great success with the American editions of Spurgeon's sermons, from which, notwithstanding the absence of copyright protection, the author obtained important returns.

Robert Carter & Bro. controlled a large part of the business of supplying the books for Sunday-school libraries, Presbyterian and others. They had on their list a number of wholesome popular books for young people, such as the "Rutherford Children," by the Warner sisters. The firm brought its business to a close after the death of Robert Carter in the early eighties.

Ivison, Blakeman & Co. and A. S. Barnes & Co. were during this period probably the largest educational publishers in the country. It was, I believe, under the direction of Henry Ivison that the great combination was made between the New York educational publishers and two houses of the West, which resulted in the organization of the American Book Company.

The interests of the medical profession were supplied in New York by William Wood and by the medical department of D. Appleton & Co. The authoritative publishers of scientific and technical publications were John Wiley & Son, whose house dates back to 1837, and David Van Nostrand. The most important production, speaking commercially, of Van Nostrand, was Casey's "Tactics," which was put together rather hurriedly in 1861 in order to meet the urgent needs of the newly constituted volunteer army. The "Tactics" was printed in three volumes, and in the years between '61 and '65 Van Nostrand placed "in the field," so to speak, no less than 300,000 sets.

Nearly every youngster who went into the ranks during these years was impressed with the thought that he might wake up any morning and find himself a brigadier, and that it was important to have the necessary preparation. He was, therefore, not content to purchase the first volume, which provided the Manual of Arms and the routine for the soldier, but he put into his haversack also the two volumes giving the principles of regimental and brigade drill and of larger military movements. These books were scattered over every battlefield of the Confederacy.

The firm of Henry Holt & Co. was founded in 1866 under the style of Leypoldt & Holt. From the beginning its undertakings, outside at least the list of textbooks, were all to be classed as belonging to literature with a high literary standard. Among the transatlantic authors whose books were issued (before the copyright law of 1891) in authorized editions, the most noteworthy were Mill, Maine, Taine, and Symonds. One of their latest publishing undertakings, the Unpopular Review, represents a personal interest of its editor, the founder of the house. The issues for the first two volumes have been described, and with justice, as presenting the most noteworthy collection of essays that have thus far been brought into print in the United States.

The Century Company, which began business in 1870 with the publication of the Century Magazine (a development of the original Scribner's), succeeded in the course of a few years in building up a valuable list of hymn books and a group of important works of reference, of which the Century Dictionary was the most noteworthy.

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS OPENS NEW YORK BRANCH.

On Wednesday of this week the Princeton University Press opened a New York branch at 311 W. 43d Street (telephone, Bryant 5444), from which the trade will be supplied with their publications in the future. While the new branch will serve as the chief distributing center, all accounts will still be carried from the main office in Princeton. Donald M. Roy, who has been with the Press since his graduation from Princeton two years ago, will be in charge of the New York office.

The Princeton Press has been growing steadily since the handsome plant on William Street was opened a couple of years ago. The list already includes a number of steady sellers, such as Conklin's "Heredity and Environment," the Princeton Monographs in Art and Archaeology, Goethal's "Government of the Canal Zone," Schurman's "Balkan Wars," Root's "Experiments in Government," and other volumes in the Stafford Little Lectures, and the list announced for this fall is the strongest in its history.

BEST-SELLING BOOKS.

OBITUARY NOTES.

Dr. William A. Croffut, editor and traveler, died on July 31 at his home in Washington, D. C., at the age of 80. He was connected at one time or another with a number of prominent newspapers throughout the country, and was the author of the following books: "Helping Hand for American Homes," "War History of Connecticut," "The Vanderbilts," "Folks Next Door," "A Midsummer Lark," "The Open Door of Dreamland," "The Lord's Day or Man's," "Labor's Riddle Guessed At," "Fifty Years in Camp and Field, being a Diary of Maj.-Gen. Ethan Allen Hitchcock," "The Crimson Wolf," and several volumes of verse. He also wrote "Deseret," an opera, with music by Dudley Buck.

Walter Emanuel, the humorous writer, died in London on August 4. He was born in London, April 2, 1869, and was educated in England and at the University of Heidelberg. He was widely known for his "Charivari" in Punch. He was the author of the following books: "Me," 1901; "A Dog Day," 1902; "People," 1903; "The Snob," 1904; "Mr. Punch's Diary," 1905; "Only My Fun," 1905; "The Zoo," 1905; "Paris—A Frolic," 1906; "The Dogs of War," 1906; "Never," 1907; "Puck Among the Pictures," 1908; "The Dog World and Anti-Cat Review," 1909; "One Hundred Years Hence," 1911; "Tommy Lobb," 1912; "Bubble and Squeak," 1913; "The Dog Who Wasn't What He Thought He Was," 1914; "A Fly Day," 1914.

Alfred B. Lawson, one of the old time travelers in the book trade, died at his residence in Jersey City on August 3rd, age 75. He began with Robert Carter & Bros. in the early sixties and continued to be their sole representative on the road until the firm went out of business in 1890. He then joined the traveling staff of Marcus Ward & Co., whose line he carried chiefly through the western territory. Later he became associated with Thomas Whittaker's Church publishing house, remaining with them for nearly fifteen years. For several years past he has been inactive owing to advancing years. He was one of the early members of the Booksellers' League of New York, and always took a keen interest in its various social events. He is survived by a son, two daughters, and several grand-children.

Sinclair Tousey, at one time president of the Frank Tousey Publishing Company, of New York, was found dead on July 28 in his bedroom at Yonkers, N. Y. Gas was flowing from an open jet. The coroner decided that death was probably accidental. Mr. Tousey was 54 years old. As a young man he was taken into his father's publishing house. Later he went into business with his brother in Frank Tousey, Inc., periodical publishers. This firm for years printed thousands of dime and half dime novels that were the rage among youths in the 90's. When Frank died Sinclair took over the business. Two years ago he went before Supreme Court Justice Erlanger to have the publishing corporation dissolved, charging that his niece, Miss Norma Hastings, and Harry Wolff, a partner, had conspired to force him out of the concern. The court decided against him. Later he filed a petition in bankruptcy.

MAARTEN MAARTENS, the novelist, died on August 4 at Zeist, Holland. He was born in Amsterdam in 1858, his name in private life being Joost Marius Willem der Poorten-Schwartz, the name Maarten Maartens only being assumed as a nom de plume when he began to become famous. Educated at the Gymnasium at Bonn and at Utrecht University, he received degrees from Aberdeen University, and University of Pennsylvania, and was created a Fellow of the Royal Society of Literature of England. His novels were originally written in English and later were translated into his own language. Of his many books, "God's Fool," which was published in 1892, is probably the most widely known. His other books are: "The Sin of Joost Avelingh," 1890; "An Old Maid's Love," 1891; "A Question of Taste," 1891; "The Greater Glory," 1894; "My Lady Nobody," 1895; "Her Memory," 1898; "Some Women I Have Known," 1901; "My Poor Relations," 1903; "Dorothea," 1904; "The Jailbird" (one act play), 1904; "The Healers," 1906; "The Woman's Victory," 1906; "The New Religion," 1907; Brothers All," 1909; "The Price of Lis Doris," 1909; "Harmen Pols, Peasant," 1910; and "Eve," 1912.

SIR SANDFORD FLEMING, civil engineer, scientist, and public man, died in Halifax, N. S., on July 22 in his eighty-ninth year. He was responsible, among other things, for the adoption by the railroads of this country and Canada of the standard English, or Greenwich time. He built the Intercolonial Railway, and was for a number of years chief engineer of the Canadian Pacific Railway. He was the author of the following books: "England and Canada," "Time and Its Notation," "Memoirs of Universal Time and a Prime Meridian for All Nations," "The New Time Reckoning," "Old to New Westminster," and "The Inter-Colonial: A History, 1832-76."

THOMAS YOUNG CROWELL, for nearly forty years head of the T. Y. Crowell Company, died on July 30 at his home, Upper Montclair, N. J., at the age of seventy-nine. Mr. Crowell was born in West Denis, Mass., in 1836, and began work as an errand boy in Boston, in the bindery of Benjamin Bradley, who at that time bound all the publications of Ticknor & Fields, Phillips, Sampson & Co., Crosby & Nichols, and many other old Boston firms. After the death of Mr. Bradley, in 1862, he assumed charge of the business, and in 1870 began for himself in his own name. For the first few years, Mr. Crowell confined himself to the binding of books for other publishers, but in 1875 the failure of Warren & Wyman, a New York house, placed in his way a line of children's and Sunday-school books, which he decided to continue at a New York office, 744 Broadway, under the management of W. W. Wyman. Then came the opportunity to secure Phillips & Sampson's "Blue and Gold Poets"—fifteen volumes in all, which formed the nucleus of the successful "Crowell's Red Line Poets." The "Red Line," in fact, was one of the most popular series of its day. In its turn it was the basis of the present "Crowell's Poets." Meanwhile, the bindery was still conducted in Boston, but in 1900 a union of the two houses became imperative, and the entire business was consolidated under one roof at 426 and 428 West Broadway, New York.

THOMAS Y. CROWELL

Mr. Crowell was greatly beloved by his employees, many of whom came over from Boston when the change was made, and some of them could look back with pride upon a record of from thirty to forty years of continuous service. His retiring nature kept him from trade publicity, but his interest in all movements of betterment was none the less genuine. His interest in the affairs of his house was keen and continuous until almost the end. He is survived by his wife and two sons—T. Irving and Jeremiah O. Crowell.

PERIODICAL NOTES.

THE BOSTON Transcript has just celebrated its 85th anniversary.

THE Motion Picture Supplement is the name of a new magazine to be issued by the publishers of the Motion Picture Magazine. It will be issued on the fifteenth of each month, the first number to be dated September.

The Book Monthly, published in England, will appear as a quarterly until the end of the war. Cassell & Co. cease to be its publishers as it again comes under the control of its editor and founder. It will be issued from the editorial offices, 14 Tavistock St., London, W. C.

The Sperry Magazine is a new monthly for women and the home which has just appeared in New York. It is owned by the Sperry-Hutchinson Company, the Hamilton Corporation, but is not merely a house organ of the firm. It is a complete magazine in every respect, with stories, fashion ideas, hints for housewife, and matter to entertain the children. J. Milton Head is the editor.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

"MAKING MONEY," a romance by Owen Johnson, will be published by Stokes on September 30.

"AUCTION UNDER THE LAWS OF 1915" by Milton C. Work will be published shortly by the John C. Winston Co.

THE PUBLICATIONS of the Sprague Publishing Co., Detroit, have been taken over by Callaghan & Co., of Chicago.

AFTER FOUR SUCCESSIVE MONTHS in first place, "The Turmoil" has been supplanted as the best best-seller by "A Far Country."

MRS. L. AVERILL COLE-HOWLAND of Boston has received the grand prize for artistic bookbinding at the Panama-Pacific Exposition.

E. BLATTNER, of the E. Blattner Publishing Co., St. Louis, Mo., disappeared about the first of June. His wife and family seek information as to his whereabouts. Mrs. Blattner's address is 4466 Greer Avenue, St. Louis.

"POLLYANNA," as staged by Klaw & Erlanger, will make her début in Detroit on August 23. Beginning August 30 she is slated for an indefinite run at the Blackstone Theatre in Chicago.

THE PENN PUBLISHING CO. has announced a "Contrary Mary" contest for librarians similar to the one for booksellers conducted earlier in the year. The prizes will be the same—$50, $20, $15, $10, and $5.

HOUGHTON MIFFLIN CO. published Mary Roberts Rinehart's "K" and Kate Douglas Wiggin's "Penelope's Postscripts" on Friday. Twice as many copies of "K" were sold before publication as were sold altogether of either "The Street of Seven Stars" or "The After House."

COINCIDENT WITH THE wedding of Miss Katharine A. Page, daughter of Walter H. Page, to C. G. Loring in the Chapel Royal of St. James' Palace on August 4, comes the announcement of the engagement of Frank C. Page, the youngest son of the American Ambassador, to Miss Katharine Sefton, of Auburn, N. Y.

"WHAT WE SAW AT MADAME WORLD'S FAIR," a new juvenile by Elizabeth Gordon, author of "Flower Children," "Bird Children," etc., consisting of a series of letters from the twins at the Panama-Pacific Exposition to their cousins at home, will be published by Samuel Levinson of San Francisco on August 7. The color plates, line drawings and end papers are by Bertha Corbett, the "Sunbonnet Babies" artist.

THE FORD MOTOR COMPANY, Detroit, has brought suit against a purchaser of one of its cars in Manhattan, Ill., who bought the car from a former Ford agent at less than the established price. The Ford bills of sale require a signature by one of the company's officers, which is not given on irregular purchases at less than the list price. The purchaser in the present case being unable to show such a bill of sale, the company claims that the title to the car has not passed.

THE DOUBLEDAY, PAGE BOOKSHOP in the Pennsylvania Terminal, New York City, has put up inside the shop a large bulletin board with a glass front; across the top is painted the legend "A Word from the Authors." Inside the frame are displayed autograph letters from Joseph Conrad, Stewart Edward White, Gene Stratton-Porter, Harry Leon Wilson, Colonel E. D. Swinton, Walter Prichard Eaton, Montague Glass, and Arthur Train. The letters give a pleasant little touch of intimacy to the Bookshop and they are exciting considerable comment. Publishers are generally glad to supply autograph letters from their leading authors for such display purposes.

THE BOOKSELLER who complains that good juveniles are few and far between will do well to watch out for August 28 which will be Juvenile Day with Henry Holt & Co. On that day they will publish "The Cinder Pond," a girl's story by Carroll Watson Rankin whose "Dandelion Cottage" is in its 16th edition, "Tom Strong, Junior," by Alfred Bishop Mason whose earlier book, now in its sixth edition, was well recommended in the A. L. A. Booklist, "The King of the Flying Sledge," a story for small boys by Clarence Hawkes, author of "Hitting the Dark Trail" and other juveniles, "Camp Bob's Hill," another of Charles Pierce Burton's stories of boy life, "In Morgan's Wake" and "Uncle Abner's Legacy," boy's stories by A. Hyatt Verrill, author of "The Cruise of the Cormorant," and "In the Land of Make Believe," a nursery book by E. Boyd Smith.

Dalrymple, Leona. The lovable meddler; il. by Grant Tyson Reynard. Chic., Reilly & Britton. c. 381 p. col. pls. D $1.35 n.
Leddy Rose had an irresponsible would-be artist for a father and a large family of sisters to mother. Moreover, there was an unpaid debt which rested too lightly on her father's shoulders, and so she refused to marry Larry. After a tragic night in the open, Larry sailed away to the Far East. The love affairs of the other lads of the "Music Box" were also going so badly that Dr. Glenmuir, a quaint old sentimentalist, felt obliged to have a finger in the pie. The machinations of the "Lovable Meddler" were entirely successful, making Leddy Rose's sacrifice unnecessary and clearing the air in all directions.

Because a famous surgeon lost faith in himself, he takes an obscure position, and under the name of K. Le Moyne engages lodging in the home of Sidney Page. Sidney enters a hospital to train for a nurse, and becomes engaged to Max Wilson, a fascinating and clever surgeon. While on a farewell outing with another nurse, Charlotta Harrison, a former flame, Max is shot by a jealous lover of Sidney's, who believes Max's companion to be Sidney herself. To save Max, K. performs a difficult operation and thus discloses his identity. A climax is reached when Sidney and K. discover what they mean to each other and what part the nurse, Charlotta, has played in K.'s previous loss of faith.

Vaizey, Jessie Bell [Mrs. G: de Horne Vaizey]. What a man wills. N. Y., Putnam. c. 3+346 p. col. front. D $1.35 n.

A gathering of people at a week-end house party disclose, one by one, their ambitions and desires. In the chapters ensuing the reader is allowed to follow these people and watch the fulfillment of these desires and the consequent results. Thus is told the story of the girl who wanted money, or the one who wished for adventure, or the other who asked to be happy; and of the men, who, in turn, wished for comfort, or success, or danger, or love. After fifteen years, the same people meet and compare notes, quite honestly, and, of course, philosophically.

Van Dyne, Edith, pseud. Aunt Jane's nieces in the Red Cross. Chic., Reilly & Britton. c. 256 p. front. D (Aunt Jane's nieces ser.) 60 c.

Maud Stanton, a successful moving-picture actress, determines to become a nurse in the European War. Patsy and Beth, two nieces of Uncle John Merrick, an eccentric millionaire, decide to go along. Uncle John offers his yacht for a hospital ship, and the whole party enter the Red Cross service.

Whitney, Elliott. The king condor of the Andes; il. by Fred J. Arting. Chic., Reilly & Britton. c. 275 p. pls. D (Boys' big game ser.) 60 c.

There is a plot afoot to prevent the completion of a little South-American railroad in the time allowed by the government. Rod and Phil go through a siege of narrow escapes, no little amount of hard knocks and labor before the enemy is outwitted. Then comes the greatest test of all, the rescue of Phil's father, which brings the boys face to face with the King Condor of the Andes.

PRINTING FROM TYPE

Sometimes the prospective sale of a book does not warrant the expense involved in the making of electrotype plates.

In that case we can print the book from the type and the cost of making plates can be saved.

We print hundreds of different books every year from type in this way.

THE PAPER BUYING PROBLEM

The two great factors—Price and Quality.
Your Purchasing Agent secures Best Price.
Tests determine Best Quality.
Combine the two for Efficiency.

Price Cutting is Dangerous

There exists, during quiet periods, an unhealthy condition among the bookmaking trades. He who cuts prices in dull times advances them in good times. We hope you will not be misled. Incidentally our prices are always uniform.

Reference List of New Publications

Recorded in JULY, 1915

This Reference List enters the books recorded during the month under (1) author, in Clarendon type, anonymous books having Clarendon type for the first word; (2) title in Roman; (3) subject-heading in SMALL CAPS; (4) name of series in Italics.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas. W: William.

For books received sizes are given in CAPS, Q, O, D, etc., books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 12°, etc. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. Where not specified the binding is cloth.

Those desiring to learn the entire publishing output of the month in any one field should look under one of the following MAIN HEADINGS:

PHILOSOPHY	MEDICINE	LITERATURE
RELIGION AND THEOLOGY	AGRICULTURE	POETRY
SOCIOLOGY	HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS	DRAMA
LAW	BUSINESS	FICTION
EDUCATION	ENGINEERING, TECHNOLOGY	BIOGRAPHY
PHILOLOGY	FINE ARTS	GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL
SCIENCE	GAMES, SPORTS, AMUSEMENTS	HISTORY

Besides the titles listed under each of these headings cross reference is made from each to a limited number of cognate headings which collectively give all the new publications of the month in the given subject or group of subjects.

Inquirers looking for books on a specific topic should look under the general subject to which that topic belongs, i.e. GEOLOGY rather than SILURIAN PERIOD; MATHEMATICS rather than CALCULUS; ECONOMICS rather than WAGES. Books regarding specific Religious denominations, countries and persons, however, should still be sought for under their individual names.

Carroll W. Rankin's New Story for Girls

THE CINDER POND

By the Author of

DANDELION COTTAGE	16th printing
THE GIRLS OF GARDENVILLE	7th printing
THE ADOPTING OF ROSA MARIE	7th printing
THE CASTAWAYS OF PETE'S PATCH	6th printing

Mrs. Rankin has the rare talent of writing just the sort of books girls like—look at the copies of her earlier books in your public or school library and you'll have proof of this. Her books are also wholesome and of unusual quality—look at what the standard lists of books for young folks say of them.

Mrs. Rankin

With cover and illustrations by Ada C. Williamson. $1.25 net

Alfred Bishop Mason's New Story of the Young United States

TOM STRONG, JUNIOR

A sequel, with Tom Strong's son as hero, to

TOM STRONG, WASHINGTON'S SCOUT	6th printing / Also in Boy Scout's Library
TOM STRONG, BOY CAPTAIN	2nd printing

Rattling good stories, and yet young readers will learn more history, and that trustworthy, from these than from their regular school work.

Profusely illustrated from drawings, etc. $1.25 net

Ready September 11th
